Pride can be seen as Envy's opposite. Instead of wanting what someone else has, or yearning to have what is not yours, Pride fully embraces ones abilities, looks, and talents – and not in a good way. Pride is a total infatuation with one's self. It goes beyond confidence in oneself, and starts to impose its influences onto others. It's spreads out through the air, and crawls on the skin of those who are near. It causes envy, by those who lack it. It causes Lust to those who want it. It causes Greed to those who yearn for it. It causes Gluttony to feel defeated. It causes Sloth to simmer. Finally, it causes Wrath to swell for it has tried, and failed to obtain it. Pride influences all other sins because it is our human nature to want to feel complete. We want to like who we are. Yet it is the most destructive because if one has pride, yet lacks humility, it can consume him. It can cause one to loose touch with ones society and become obsessive with one's self. Pride is something that is still a mystery to those who don't have it, yet it is all consuming to those who have obtained it.
