

A note on this template:

The necessary items for your map are included on this layout: map (graphics), thesis, legend, title and name placement. You are welcome to alter the arrangement of these items on the page, but not at the sacrifice of legibility. This template has been made to print without scaling - (2) 11"x17" pages with a .25" margin to the rule lines. One page will need to be trimmed. To print one 22"x17" page, you will need to alter the artboards, and trim any excess margin.

Please do not alter the 22"x17" format unless it is truly necessary for your graphic approach.

MAP

Your map is a systematic analysis of your thesis, but it needs to go further: how your thesis is demonstrated on the map. It needs to be visually compelling and legible, both.

The key objectives of your map are:

- identifying the defining characteristics
- developing a graphic language to communicate

NAME

TITLE (including site name and location)

THESIS

NAME

Your thesis should illustrate a clear and concise position on the site through the readings assigned - your position will define the criteria of analysis performed on the site and brought to your map.

The main objective of your thesis is to clarify what you may find intuitively intriguing on the site. Unpacking what you may initially perceive intuitively will give you the tools of analysis you need to investigate the site with depth.

The readings are meant to help you read each site in key ways - evidence of both your comprehension and how you see these readings manifested on the site is crucial. Paraphrasing (with acknowledgment) and/or limited quoting are acceptable and encouraged. Be aware - I will be looking for your comprehension of the main ideas, not one sentence that suits your purpose.

Be pithy - choose your words wisely. Work to be under 300 words. Spell check often, your legibility can affect your grade.

teristics of the context through analysis to cohesively illustrate your analysis

LEGEND

Accurate and complete labels are vital to your map for legibility and to aid in developing a sophisticated graphic language,

While your analysis may exist at different scales and orientations, an awareness of these on your map is important. Consider relative scales, accuracy in your drawings and your attitude towards orientation when laying out your page.
