

My response:

Thanks for the good question XXXX. There is a protocol and we will discuss it further later in the course but just to get you started you need to ask yourself these questions when determining whether a sources is credible or not.

Who wrote the information? Is that person an expert in the field? Are they biased in a certain way? Do they list the research they used and is it credible? Is the information current? Can you back up their claims with any other resources?

That is for now, hope that helps. I am confident we will meet your expectations for the course!
