

After reading chapters 2 and 3 i thought it was a little interesting on the fact of how the two accounts viewed what happened. But after reading the myth of the kings army I think its funny how this myth is saying that the spanish king and his army was not an army at all but just a group of respective footmen, servants, pages and mercenaries. Also they were not controlled by the spanish king. In chapter 3 about the the Myth of the White Conquistador was talking about how the conquest was accomplished by a small group of conquistadors. The conquistadors and it allies over took the spanish outnumbering them. This changes the way i thought about the conquest because i knew pretty much nothing about it and now that i have some information about it changes my mind considerably.
